D. W. STEELE,
Manager of the GAZETTE.

General Slocum, who was last autumn elected congressman-at-large from New York, has been in Denver for several days. According to the News he thinks that the democratic candidate for president will be from the west and the republican candidate from the east. He hardly expects the democrats to come out for free trade.

Mr. Arthur has kind things said about him sometimes these days. Probably many who were very sorry to see him become president will admit that he has not done so badly as he might have done. In saying this it is not necessary to say that he has done remarkably well. But in any case it can hardly be denied that he has not made a very profound impression on the country. As a candidate for the presidency he would be a wet blanket.

Some one calls attention to the fact that if John Wilkes Booth or Charles J. Guiteau had escaped to a foreign country we should have wanted the fugitive. We would not have been satisfied with the claim of a political offense. If there are in this country any clearly proven Irish assassins, our government should allow England to have them at the earliest possible moment. Such "patriots" need hanging worse than they need anything else.

Much has been said in the papers about the new civil service commission, and much that has been said has not been at all complimentary. The commissioners have a very difficult place to fill. Machine politicians and machine newspapers will find fault and bestow ridicule whether there is cause or not. And if, through incompetence or for any other reason, the commission is not a success, the cause of civil service reform will surely suffer. But a better civil service is sure to come, if not in one way, then in another.

We have already referred to the speech Mr. Conkling made to the Saturday Night club the other day. The Philadelphia Record speaks wisely of Mr. Conkling's statement about General Grant and the third term:

"I believe as firmly as I believe anything," exclaimed the orator, "that the results of that convention have cost this nation its progress fully ten years." In the life of a progressive people ten years are a long time in this epoch; but what great personal influence would General Grant have exercised in promoting the country's progress if he had been chosen president? Mr. Conkling intimates, with a coarse sarcastic sneer, that the statesmanship of the country would have been diverted from the great issue of "finding out what boy or girl shall have a place in the government employ," and from merely "playing push-pin over the rot and rubbish of low, tricky politics," and have given "some attention to our commercial relations with Mexico." Though General Grant was eight years in the presidential office and Conkling more than twice as many in congress, is it not strange that they should both have discovered the vast importance of more friendly relations with Mexico only when they ceased to exercise any influence over the subject? What were they doing all those years but finding places for their partisans in government employ and playing push-pin in politics?

Perhaps it is a good thing for people to have hobbies. A man who puts his whole soul into one thing has a show of accomplishing something. But the reasoning of a hobbyist is quite apt to be queer reasoning. If he is opposing something, he can lay on that something a large portion of the ills of human nature. If he is the advocate of some theory, he sees that with the adoption of his theory will begin a millennial period. The protection people, who lay so much stress on the claim of being practical, are much given to this sort of thing. They convince themselves with little difficulty that in the United States protection has brought prosperity, and free trade adversity, though there seems to be good evidence that under all sorts of commercial conditions our country has prospered. Even the colonies were not kept from prosperity by the navigation acts imposed by England. Last autumn Mr. Secretary Teller gave a somewhat remarkable example of the sort of reasoning of which we are speaking. He claimed, it will be remembered, that a tariff law passed in 1846 brought on the panic of 1857. But he thought he had better account also for the panic of 1873. Free trade would not do as the cause, for we did not have free trade then. So Mr. Teller had resort to the demonetization of silver. And this is the general result reached: Free trade will bring on a panic in ten or eleven years, while the demonetization of silver can bring on a panic in a few months. And this latter resulted though in eighty years there had been coined less than eight million silver dollars and in spite of the fact that any tendency towards a panic was restrained by the wise and beneficent law of protection. The demonetization of silver under a free trade policy would, we presume, bring on a panic in about half an hour. But honester and wiser men than Mr. Teller argue in an equally conclusive way. We clip the following specimen from a paper of unquestionable ability. Only notice the intimate connection between the woes of Ireland and the lack of the inestimable boon of protection to Irish manufactures: "We wait to see, in the long, long wordy deliverances of the convention, any just appreciation of the Irish situation. The authors of these deliverances see the Irish question on this side and on that, but not as a whole. They are willing even to go on with the quackery of the Gladstonian legislation, which treats the Irish difficulty as a land difficulty, which arrays one section of the Irish people against another, and which leaves the real evil untouched. They do go further than Mr. Gladstone. They speak of Irish resources that lie unused, and of Irish manufactures which should be encouraged by Irishmen in America as well as at home. But they do not seem to see that this has anything to do with the land question, or that the revival of Irish manufactures would constitute the true and only solution of that question. In this they missed a great opportunity. They might have awakened a response through the civilized world if they had demanded Irish legislative independence as a necessary step towards such a protection of Irish manufactures as Russia, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Austria, Italy, France, Canada and America have found necessary for their national welfare. We suppose that they stopped, after going so far, because of the relations of the Irish vote in America to the free trade party. To have avowed themselves protectionists, although a democratic protectionist was in the chair, might have impressed such sympathetic statesmen as Mr. S. S. Cox and Mr. John Kelly unfortunately. But there is no other course for the true friends of Ireland. If Ireland were in control of her own destinies, this is one of the first uses she would make of her legislative independence. Yet the majority of the Irishmen in America are helping to break down, in the country of their adoption, the policy which experience has proved vitally necessary to the country of their birth." Maybe after all that there is not so much reason as some of us think, for laughing at the man who thought the whole material universe was nothing and tar water everything.

Crime and Manners.

H. E. Hoare, in the National Review.

I was at first agreeably surprised, as any stranger would be, by their good manners. When they were on their good behavior there was, for the most part, nothing in their conduct to make one suppose they were the rough characters that they really were. Appearances were often so deceptive that I was, particularly at first, constantly making the most flagrant mistakes in my estimate of them. A career of crime seemed to effect some men and not others. Some were unmistakeable. They would never by any chance look one straight in the face, and were incapable of a hearty laugh. Fear seemed always present with them. Others, on the other hand, whose criminal record was as black, seemed not at all the worse of it. Give them good clothes and they would have passed for honest workingmen; change their circumstances, and they would give up robbery. Of this character was a man, who, after hearing a lecture in the club, came up to me and asked me if I thought the lecturer, who had spoken of America as a field of emigration, would help him to get out there. This man was only 37 years old, and had spent 20 years of his life in prison. He said that he was sick of the life he had been leading, but that unless he could get out of this country he would get locked up again. He was so well known, he said, to the police that if a robbery was committed, and he was anywhere near the place at the time, he would be arrested, previous convictions proved against him, and sent to prison. The prospect of another seven years was so constantly before his eyes that he was actually afraid to go out, and his fear so infected me that I hardly let him out of my sight until we started. An amusing incident occurred as we drove to the station from which he was to start from Liverpool. "You see that tall well-dressed man," he said, "with a cane and an eye-glass, coming this way, smoking a cigar? That's 'Long Charlie,' as they call him. I saw him last in prison." Just then there was a block in the street, and "Long Charlie" met his eye. In an instant the whole expression of his face changed; my emigrant's nod of recognition had changed, as by magic, the saunt'ring gentleman into the slinking convict. Long Charlie's was the last familiar face which he saw in London. I had a letter from him a year afterward from Canada, in which he said that he had got into good work, but had had an accident, and would be glad if I would lend him $10; he wished to be remembered to my manager and all "the boys" in the club. His friends in street were all agreed about the desirability of getting him out of the country, and were glad to hear he was doing well. They were all sure that he really wished to "go straight," and were equally convinced, as he was himself, that if he stopped in England he would get into prison whether he had done anything to deserve it or not. As a rule, I found that the men whose hang-dog look proclaimed them what they were were reticent about their histories, but those who had none of the prison taint about them had usually no hesitation giving me the details of their convictions. It was difficult always to understand their stories exactly, as just at the critical point they would use some words of which I could not catch the meaning; and the point of many a joke, which they seemed to consider excellent, was lost upon me in this way. My own remarks, too, would sometimes create great amusement when I had no intention of being funny, from my having used some word or phrase which had quite a different meaning to them from that which I had intended. One of these unexpected bursts of merriment occurred in the lecture of which I have spoken above. The lecturer was speaking of tea-drinking in China, and on mentioning the Chinese word to express the custom of using the old tea-leaves a second time was disconcerted by roars of laughter from all parts of the room, and shouts of a monosyllable word which I have forgotten. It was explained to him that they were amused at the Chinese having the same practice as themselves, and the word which they shouted out was the slang term to express the same thing.

Albertus Magnus and His Automaton.

Catholic World.

Albertus Magnus possessed a wonderful knowledge of chemistry, natural philosophy and medicine. His spare time, when freed from the onerous duties of lecturer, was taken up with experiments in these sciences. So well did he succeed in these things, and such marvelous results did he often obtain, that the common people feared him, and even among the learned it was bruited abroad that he was in secret collusion with the dark powers. He studied the nature of the many diseases to which mankind is heir, and in consequence was often able to effect cures when the physician's art had failed. This was ascribed to his power of magic, and many of the simple people looked upon him with terror. Even the brothers of the convent feared to enter his dread workshop, and crossed themselves devoutly when obliged to enter within its mysterious precincts. History is full of legends about his wonderful power in mechanics, and represents him to us as not only surprising the lowlier classes, but as astounding the educated by his contrivances. Even Thomas of Aquin is related to have been terror-stricken by what he saw within the hidden sanctuary of his master. It is said that one day Thomas, whose curiosity led him to observe his master's work, profited by his absence to examine the interior of his laboratory. Strange animals which he had never before seen, instruments artistically made, vessels of most curious shape, were there exposed. Thomas' astonishment increased in proportion as he looked around. Something drew him toward the corner of the room. A scarlet curtain, reaching in long and close folds to the ground, seemed to him to conceal an object. He approached, and, timidly drawing aside the curtain, found himself face to face with a beautiful maiden. He wished to fly, but felt himself detained by magical force, and was compelled, in spite of himself, to gaze on the enchanting figure of a young girl. The more he gazed, the more it shone before his eyes, the greater became his confusion. But this was not all. The strange form addressed to him the triple salutation: "Salve, salve, salve." Frightened beyond measure, Thomas imagined that the prince of hell was sporting with him. In the fear and uneasiness that possessed him he strove to defend himself as best he could against the tempter. He seized a stick which was near him, and, exclaiming, "Begone, Satan!" struck the imaginary demon repeated blows, until the automaton (for it was nothing else) broke in pieces. Then, seized with terror, he turned to fly from the room, when he was met at the door by Albert. The master, seeing what had happened in his absence, and that the fruit of his long application was annihilated, cried aloud in grief: "O Thomas, Thomas! what have you done? In one instant you have destroyed the labor of 30 years!" It would appear that Albert had made an automaton capable of pronouncing certain phrases and of walking across a room while sweeping it. This was the demon which terrified Thomas and which occupied the thoughts of the inventive Albert. A host of other traditions have been handed down concerning him, many of them even ludicrous, but which fortunately have been denied by his earliest biographers. For instance, he is said to have transported the daughter of the king of France through the air to Cologne. Another states that he rode to Rome on the back of the devil to absolve the pope from some peccadillo into which he had fallen. Another tells us that he traversed the globe with Alexander the Great. Yet from these relics we may well gather the impression which Albert must have left upon his age, since legend and fable and poetry all combine to weave a historic garland for him. However, though he excelled in science and arts, in metaphysics and philosophy, the grandest claim which he has to our love and veneration comes from the fact that, while first in letters he was also first among his peers in virtue.

By Universal Accord,

Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use, by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effectual purgative Pill that medical science can devise. Being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use, and being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take. In intrinsic value and curative powers no other Pills can be compared with them, and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure, if timely taken. They are the best and safest physic to employ for children and weakened constitutions, where a mild but effectual cathartic is required.

THE NEW CARBONATE FIND

The new carbonate strike in the San Juan country which has already awakened so great an interest throughout our state and even beyond our borders is on Crystal mountain twenty three miles northwest of Del Norte and extends through a belt of country full two miles wide. Parties who have been there from the first discovery are sanguine in Colorado, and can be worked without the least difficulty the whole year without the least interruption. There has been probably more rain about this section but, on the contrary the policy generally pursued has been to keep very quiet in relation thereto. That it will prove to be one of the greatest bonanzas in the world no doubt, who are conversant with the country. People have been pouring into the country steadily during the past few days and indications are that the close of the coming summer will find towns, town, filled by populous with spirit but resistance in that art of the valuable which is so justly tributary to the Pueblos by reason of rail connections. There is nothing exhausted no doubtful about Crystal mountain for it is no humbug whoop but a solid substantial country with vast quantities of rich ore and valuable metals in hand only, which other and more circumstances localities are lacking.

THE END OF

The Mountain Belle

Everything indicates that the Mountain Belle is the shining mine of the near future. As the excitement out has increased, the confidence and energy within grow. Daily we see increased activity and arrive most favorable reports from all parts of the district. No one is discouraged by either there is nothing to discourage any one. Men who have been in the district every before hand, and like a good friend, we think more of the district the more we know of it. No more development than is the older it gets.

The snow is rapidly disappearing and prospectors are beginning out, looking after hitherto untouched parts of the district, and with uniform favorable results. It must be remembered that the greater portion of this large district has as yet not been prospected at all, and consequently there is every inducement to the prospector. To capitalists we can show no less than twenty five mines in the district with sufficient ore bodies exposed to ship an endless quantity of mineral.

Red Mountain does not base its claims on a few prospect holes. We have timbered in place, and more of it than any other district in the country. Every week, and almost every day, adds to the number of our producing, paying mines, and we think in drawing it very mild when we offer the prediction that Red Mountain's output for the year 1883—the first year, we might say, the year of its birth—will approximate the neat little sum of $2,000,000. From the mines developed during the past three months in mid winter, we have no doubt that will be shipped 1,000 tons of ore weekly after the first day of July, if not sooner. Red Mountain will surprise its best friends and make a showing, before the present season is over of which we will all be proud.

THE COLORADO SPRINGS GROUP

Leadville Chronicle

Among the best properties at the head of Buckskin gulch are what is known as the Colorado Springs group owned by Alderman David A. Cowell and Sheriff Becker. The property consists of ten claims, namely the Tiger tunnel, Becker, Dominion Boy, Colorado Springs, Cowell, Nancy C., Irene, Holman and Phoenix tunnel. About $15,000 have been expended in the development of the property, and the owners are beginning to realize something on the the expenditures made by them. About $6,000 worth of ore has been shipped from the Colorado Springs alone. Some of the ore assays as high as $20,000 to the ton. This claim is developed by means of a shaft which is down a considerable depth. The Phoenix tunnel is in about 60 feet, and is following an eighteen inch vein of fine galena. In fact all the claims in this group have been developed sufficiently for a patent, for which they have applied. The property bids fair to be a heavy producer before the summer is over.

The Glasgow is another claim in Buckskin owned by Alderman Cowell and others. This claim has a tunnel in 150 feet on a vein of iron, which is running into galena. All the last-mentioned claims are being worked by the owners, who feel sanguine that with proper development they will prove to be rich paying properties.

GILPIN'S NEW BOOM

Correspondence of the Denver Republican

Your correspondent knowing that the mining booms had broken out in a severe form, and believing it contagious, was loth to believe the newspaper reports of the rich strikes recently made in the new silver camp west of this city. We boarded a Colorado Central train at Denver on April 9, arriving here the same day to investigate and learn the facts of the new silver camp for the interest of Denver parties. Since our arrival here we have carefully examined the most noted prospect of the new camp, which is located on and in the vicinity of Sulphuret Mountain, and will cheerfully say that the new camp is justly entitled to all that has been claimed for it. There is no undue excitement here, such as usually prevails in new towns, but there is life and activity to be seen on every hand. Central really gives evidence of assuming the airs of old, in the days of gold—the days of '59. The silver belt lies adjacent and parallel to the gold lodes of Central and Black Hawk and is reached about one mile west from Central. And while the silver belt extends several miles west of Central, where large veins of argentiferous galena are known to exist, and, strange to say, but little prospecting has been done west of Sulphuret mountain, which is two and one half miles distant from Central, except for gold.

Here is a harvest for prospectors such as perhaps had never been known since the first discoveries in this state. We will omit a detailed description of any one property, as they have already been so correctly described by able corresponding of the Denver journals. The ores carry galena and brittle silver, black silver, horns, chlorides of copper and iron. The veins are perpendicular and fine fissure. The formation is granite and porphyry for two miles of development this is evidently one of the most promising mining districts both in extent and richness ever discovered in the west and now while trip in consists the front with a silver camp, with an area fifty times larger than that of the gold district, it is evident that she is now on the eve of a boom that will astonish the world. Here are the greatest inducements for capital ever known in the history of mining. Money can be invested here with almost as much certainty as in government bonds and often realize ten hundred per cent per year. While we have an aversion for loud talk and premature booms, we will say that the product of Gilpin county bids fair to be twenty five times greater within the next five years than at the present time, and figures will verify what is here claimed.

Robbing a Robber

New Orleans Times 10—A Pleasant Valley spirit sign. Five thousand dollars worth of gambling apparatus was burned on the public square this morning by order of the municipal court. Five hundred gamblers are idle, the city on account of the law against gambling, and have gone to Chicago.

A Relic of Pizarro

New Orleans Times

An employee of the senate yesterday came across a rather interesting relic of Abraham Lincoln. He was moving a box of books at the capitol when he found it. Been detached for many years. A volume of Prescott's History of Mexico directed his attention and he took it home to look through it. As he opened it a card caught his attention. On examination it proved to be a professional card of Lincoln's, following was described on it. "A Lincoln Attorney at Law, Springfield, Ill." On one side of it was this sentence: "I am still practicing my profession on this side of the river, and shall be ready at all times to crack a lick, swap jokes or split rails until the 1st of March." Was the card a burlesque or was it a genuine professional card? Those who saw it were unable to determine. It had evidently lain where it was found for more than twenty years. If it were genuine it was probably published by Lincoln, as a sort of a joke, at the expense of his opposition and the date of his entrance into the White House. A well known newspaper man was so well satisfied with its genuineness that he carried it away in a curious well worth preserving.

In a Tight Fix

Johnstown Epitaph

John Jones, a well known citizen of this county, on Friday last while at work in the shaft of his mine near Alamos, had just put in a blast and lighted the fuse, when, on returning to the top of the shaft, he beheld four mounted Apaches rapidly approaching. As they saw him change they increased their pace, and their fiendish yells relieved Mr. Jones of all doubts as to their intentions toward himself. For an instant he was paralyzed with terror. Being entirely unarmed, resistance was not to be thought of, while escape by flight was equally impossible. His first impulse was to hurl himself into the shaft and be blown to atoms by the explosion of the blast rather than perish miserably at the hands of the ruthless fiends who had him at their mercy. These reflections occupied only a moment's time, but the Apaches were almost upon him. Suddenly, with the instinct of despair, Mr. Jones threw himself behind a rock close at hand, and at the same instant the blast at the bottom of the shaft exploded with a terrific force, throwing a shower of rock and debris high in the air, which was followed by a dense volume of smoke pouring up from the shaft. The Indians, who were now sure of their victim, halted a moment at the unexpected and to them mysterious eruption then with a yell, not of triumph, but of rage mingled with terror, wheeled their horses and galloped off in the direction whence they came.

Mr. Jones would at first scarcely realize that he escaped almost miraculously from a horrible death, but as soon as he had recovered from his amazement, departed for Los Alamos, meeting on the road a party of neighbors going out to search for his remains they having seen the Indians heading in the direction of the mine, and not doubting but Mr. Jones had fallen a victim to their savage ferocity.

Various Causes

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, on which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its results, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric, yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous, imparting an agreeable perfume.

City Engineer Ellis has sent out a party under the charge of L. A. Pease to survey the route for the Pike's Peak tramway.

Comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic and veteran soldiers were out for drill on Tejon street last night, in command of Lieutenant Saxton.

Invitations will be issued for the social dance to be given by Hook & Ladder company No. 1 which takes place next Wednesday night, May 16th.

There will be a meeting of the B. F. Criswell Hose company at their rooms in the city hall building to-night. All members are requested to be present.

Mr. Arthur, business manager of Ford's Opera company, which will appear at the opera house one week from next Saturday night, was in the city yesterday.

There will be a meeting of the Merchants' Association at the usual place to-night. It is very probable that the street sprinkling problem will be brought up and discussed.

The funeral of Mr. F. W. Beebee, who committed suicide at Denver on Sunday, took place in that city yesterday. We understand the remains will be sent east for burial.

There was a large sale of seats yesterday for Robson and Crane in the "Two Dromios" at the opera house on Saturday night. There are, however, a number of choice seats left.

All vocalists wishing to aid in the singing at the Sunday school mass meeting at the opera house on Sunday night, are requested to meet at the First M. E. church to-night at 7.30 o'clock.

A fire occurred in the garbage dump in front of the Antlers yesterday. A stranger stopping at the Colorado Springs hotel who saw it was heard to remark that "it was a pretty place for a city pretending to be a health resort to deposit its garbage."

There will be a sociable to-night at the Cumberland Presbyterian parsonage, at which refreshments will be served. All are cordially invited to attend. A collection will be taken up during the evening for the purpose of repairing the church.

Manager Nye, who on Tuesday night saw the performance given by Ford's Opera company at Denver, pronounces it one of the best balanced opera companies that has ever visited Colorado. This company will appear here Saturday, May 19th, on which occasion Gilbert & Sullivan's new opera, "Iolanthe," will be given.

At the meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Dr. Wilson was elected president for the ensuing year. Otherwise the officers remain the same as last year. Miss Gordon related some interesting experiences in the temperance work and spent half an hour in talking to the juvenile union.

The Great Plains Live Stock company, whose principal office is in Denver, of which F. H. Austin is president and Major McAllister secretary, has just received information of the successful termination of negotiations, which have been on hand for some time, for the purchase of a large tract of land comprising several ranches and a large grant in New Mexico. The range is well watered and covered with luxuriant grasses, and is capable of feeding four hundred thousand sheep. The company will put upon it at least two hundred thousand head during the present year.

Last evening, while lighting the gas, some of the drapery, ribbons, flowers, etc., in the show window of Mme. Rosa Wood's millinery store were ignited, and in a second the entire window was in a blaze. Some passers-by rushed in, took down the burning drapery and prevented the flames from communicating with the wood work. Considerable of the material in the window was destroyed. Mme. Wood estimates her damage at $20.

Immediate Relief Warranted.

Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic. Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists for the standing of Salicylica.

SALICYLICA:

THE ONLY DISSOLVER OF THE POISONOUS URIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments, and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for RHEUMATISM, GOUT and NEURALGIA. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

Give it a trial. Relief guaranteed or money refunded.
